Doug Kay Program June 11

The Sierra Camera Club will present an evening with Doug Kaye on June 11, 2019. Please join us for dinner before the program at the Old Spaghetti Factory on J St. in downtown Sacramento beginning at 5 pm. Please RSVP to Charlie Willard at cwillard@winfirst.com.

Knowing that Street Photography is foreign and even uncomfortable to some people, Doug will take us on his journey from his father's wet darkroom, through his rediscovery of still photography in the digital age, his explorations of nature, landscape, travel and macro photography to finally arrive at his love of street. Along the way, he will show examples of the various forms of street photography (still lifes, candid and portraits) and will describe how he learned to shoot each style.

Beginning his visual explorations in his father's wet darkroom, Doug earned a degree in theatrical lighting design at U.C. Berkeley in the '60s and studied cinematography at NYU's Graduate Institute of Film and Television in the '70s. He spent a year in TV news, covering the Watergate hearings for NBC/Visnews/Reuters and produced and directed two documentary films.

In the '80s he began a three-decade hiatus from still photography during a career in software and the dot-com world. A trip to Kenya brought Doug into digital photography and convinced him nature photography wasn't for him. Iceland then cured him of his interest in landscape. For the past seven years, Doug has focused almost exclusively on street photography, including shooting film (even medium format) much of the time.

Doug teaches photography locally in San Francisco and online. He leads street-photography workshops in Cuba, which he has visited eight times. He is the co-host and producer of the CameraLabs Photography gear-review podcast with Gordon Laing.
